A DECADE OF PROGRESS.

The Atlanta BeltLine’s roots go all the way back to 1999, when a Georgia Tech graduate student envisioned a way to transform 22 miles of railroad corridor around the city into transit, trails, and greenspace. The Atlanta BeltLine Partnership was formed in 2005 to raise funds and engage grassroots support for the project. In 2006, Atlanta BeltLine, Inc. was formed by Invest Atlanta to implement the vision. Now, ten years later, we celebrate a decade of progress on the ground and behind the scenes.

Since the project’s inception, nearly $3 billion in private economic development around the corridor has benefitted the 45 neighborhoods connected by the Atlanta BeltLine, providing jobs, spurring housing developments, and making access to transit a reality for the growing number of residents living in the city.

Our 2015 annual report takes a look back at the ten years leading up to now, celebrating this milestone and many milestones along the way.

A BI completed an Integrated Action Plan (IAP) in 2015 to determine how to achieve the 2005 Redevelopment Plan’s ambitious economic development, jobs, and housing goals (as noted above). The approach of the IAP is practical and action-oriented. It concentrates on fiscal years 2016 to 2020, while also establishing a longer term general framework through 2030. Additionally, real estate acquisition is emphasized in this effort as a critical tool to achieve these goals and more effectively manage development outcomes.

Progress to date is demonstrated in tangible projects which were directly supported by ABI and/or Invest Atlanta. Sample projects include Ponce City Market, Lofts at Reynoldstown Crossing, Stanton Oaks in Peoplestown, Krog Street Market, AMLI Ponce Park, Reynoldstown Senior, Sky Lofts, and over 100 units purchased with downpayment assistance in complexes around the Atlanta BeltLine.

Implementation will require significant scale and focus within ABI and from an ever expanding list of external partners. It will also require new and increased funding sources from the Atlanta community and beyond.

A BI pursues sustainable outcomes via its people and workplace, internal processes, program of projects and external partnerships. Sustainability for ABI means identifying and implementing solutions to Atlanta’s environmental, economic, and social challenges. In 2015, ABI staff, with guidance from KKH Consulting and Southface, developed a Sustainability Action Plan (SAP) to provide a framework of sustainability for the Atlanta BeltLine, both internally and externally. This plan outlines a total of eight sustainability initiatives, representing a balance between internally and externally-focused activities.
The sixth year of Art on the Atlanta BeltLine was larger than ever bringing more than 60 visual works and 50+ performances to the Eastside Trail, Historic Fourth Ward Park, Gordon White Park, Reynoldstown, and the Northeast Hiking Trail. Six performance dates, featuring hours of free entertainment, dazzled crowds from September through November.

The Lantern Parade, created and hosted by Chantelle Rytter and the Krewe of the Grateful Gluttons, smashed all expectations by bringing more than 66,000 participants and spectators to the trail to kickoff the largest temporary public art exhibit in the south.

The continuing exhibition grew to incorporate murals, sculpture, photo exhibits, and more on display year-round. More info, videos and photo galleries at: art.beltline.org.

At just a little more than a year after the groundbreaking of the Westside Trail in November 2015, we have made huge strides in construction on underground utility work, retaining walls, bridge rebuilding, and stormwater management.

When funding is available for construction, a new performance pavilion will be located on the Westside Trail, serving as a performance space and landmark for the neighborhood. The American Institute of Architects (AIA) Atlanta, in partnership with ABI and the Mayor’s Office of Cultural Affairs, sponsored the design selection competition.

The Eastside Trail welcomed 1.3 million visitors in 2015. Bids were received in 2015 for a contractor to build the Eastside Trail extension. A request for proposals for design development and construction of the Southside Trail was released by ABI. Our partners at the PATH Foundation completed construction on the Northside Spur Trail.

Two farmers were hired to manage the Adair Park Urban Farm located near the border between the Oakland City and Adair Park neighborhoods on the Westside Trail. This will be a pilot site for other urban agriculture sites around the Atlanta BeltLine.

The Atlanta BeltLine rolled out the second round of the trail etiquette campaign with the debut of a new spokesman—Eddy Cat. Eddy Cat is helping to bring the southern charm to the Atlanta BeltLine with a series of shareable images.

Our friends at Trees Atlanta contributed a collection of stainless steel leaf sculptures to the Eastside Trail that pay homage to the Atlanta BeltLine Arboretum program. The installation, “33 Oaks,” was created by artist David Landis.

Parks are the gems on the emerald necklace that outlines the Atlanta BeltLine. More than 200 acres of park space are currently open on the Atlanta BeltLine, with more than 1,300 acres of greenspace planned by 2030. For more information, visit beltline.org/parks.

In December 2015, the City of Atlanta hosted a grand opening for the Arthur Langford, Jr. Skatepark. The park honors the late civil rights icon, Arthur Langford, Jr. The park is the second official skatepark in the City of Atlanta, after the Historic Fourth Ward Skatepark.

The Historic Fourth Ward Park Conservancy and Park Pride built a new shade structure in the park’s playground. Historic Fourth Ward Park has been a favorite destination for Atlanta families since opening in 2011, and the structure provides shelter from the sun while the young shade trees planted at the park grow to maturity.

The Atlanta BeltLine Partnership continued their free fitness programming. Classes include a range of fitness levels, and provide a great opportunity to get fit on the Atlanta BeltLine. Visit beltline.org/fitsignup for the current schedule.

The Atlanta Streetcar System Plan was adopted by Atlanta City Council in December 2015. This high-level priority network focuses on 53 miles of streetcar routes. In addition, a network of connected transit includes 18 miles of new or enhanced transit service that interfaces with the streetcar system, placing emphasis on streetcar corridors and operable routes.

Environmental Assessments for transit continued on the Atlanta BeltLine West, East, and crosstown connections that will expand upon the Atlanta Streetcar. Significant progress was made on these studies in 2015, moving ABI closer to selecting a Locally-Preferred Alternative (LPA) for Atlanta BeltLine East.

In 2015, the much-anticipated pedestrian connection between Ponce City Market and the Eastside Trail was completed. ABI and Jamestown continue to work together on the next phase to create vertical connections to North Avenue, the first public plaza on the Atlanta BeltLine, and another connection with Ponce City Market. The plaza will have granite pavers, a bioswale, and a variety of trees and native grasses. It will be complete in spring 2016.
Housing

The Atlanta BeltLine Affordable Housing Trust Fund invested $800,000 in the gut rehabilitation of Stanton Oaks, formerly Boynton Village. In 2015, construction was completed and the 43 units of housing were occupied by low-income residents of the Peoplestown neighborhood. The development includes LEED certification, a new mini police precinct, and 1, 2, 3 and 4 bedroom apartments. The Trust Fund also invested $1.5 million on the development of Reynoldstown Senior, which is currently under construction. These 70-units are designed for low-income seniors in the Atlanta BeltLine-adjacent Reynoldstown neighborhood. Construction is expected to be completed in 2016.

The housing program established a new partnership in 2015 with the Federal Home Loan Bank of Atlanta (FHLBank Atlanta). More than $1.9 million in funding was leveraged by $400,000 of Atlanta BeltLine Affordable Housing Trust Funds in 2015 for a total of 17 closings with Down Payment Assistance and the completion of one of six owner-occupied rehab construction projects to fund necessary improvements on Westside Trail homes. The funding was made available exclusively to FHLBank Atlanta member financial institutions and their eligible customers earning 80 percent or less than the area median income.

Development Activation

ABI engaged with a consultant to determine specific economic development strategies focusing on particular nodes for potential development. The consultants helped identify opportunities representative for the larger Atlanta BeltLine strategy. Part of the work included short- and long-term recommendations identifying ways to include and/or preserve affordable workforce housing and how ABI can best stimulate appropriate development.

In late 2015, ABI issued a request for proposals for the Murphy Crossing Economic Development plan, funded by a grant from the US Economic Development Administration. This site, on the southern portion of the Westside Trail, represents sixteen acres of prime redevelopment potential for southwest Atlanta. With the help of consultants, ABI will complete an analysis and craft a set of recommendations focused on activating this node through appropriate developments.

Real Estate Activation

ABI works strategically to sell land not needed for implementation of trail, transit, or greenspace in the Atlanta BeltLine corridor with a focus on balancing programmatic goals such as transit-oriented development, appropriate density, and neighborhood context. With these principles in mind, ABI is working with the City’s Office of Planning and Southeast Capital, on the 695 North Avenue development. Sited at the corner of North Avenue and N. Angier across from Historic Fourth Ward Park, it will include 228 housing units accommodating mixed-use restaurant and retail, while rehabbing the historic Excelsior Mill Building that has stood at the location since 1901.
